the Boise area and in Elko, Nev., according to people interviewed by investigators. Roy Summers has also been seen in both places, sometimes with the girls.

Iwakiri was being held late Friday in the Ada County Jail on $100,000 bail. The Boise charge is second degree kidnapping, which McNichols said means there was no ransom demanded. But the charge covers such acts as concealing information.

"We've been trying to avoid having to arrest anybody," McNichols said. "All we're interested in at this time is to have the children returned. We've avoided arresting anybody because the case against the suspect (Summers) is made (good). But we felt it reached a point where there was nothing else we could do at this particular moment."
